If you go to 11.5 you really should go to a heavier one. As for reverse the heavier the better. Rival is as good as 1.5 for reverse. I think it is also easy to bend if it is not well made. I have seen really bad ones. Good luck with the decision. So you recommend a shaft that is really two different shafts because of weight? If you go to 11.5, you're going to be hitting the ball a lot in the cage, and that could lead to further flex. If you go to 11.8, your distance and spin will suffer... The only way I would consider moving a 2.5 to 1.5 would be if the 2.5 was significantly softer than the 1.5. In this case, I don't think it would be. As for your question about guys being able to swing heavier shafts, I have never seen that to be an issue. It is possible to swing a slightly heavier shaft, but I don't think you'd be able to really hit the ball any better with a 3.5 as compared to a 3.0, but I guess we don't know for sure.

I'm going to test it soon. I have more experience with a 2.5 than a 1.5. I like the sensation of hitting a 2.5 better than a 1.5. I believe some guys like it because they play with a lighter shaft. The swing is more sensitive. I'll let you know how it goes. It's possible 82157476af
